DIVERSITY, EQUITY & INCLUSION

Your Mental Health Matters!

That's why we're talking about it again here in the DEI section of this newsletter and why it's featured in the OHS section of this newsletter each time.

- Check out these helpful tips at left to help manage stress and mental health during the holidays.
- Remember, “While the holidays can be a time of celebration and joy for many, it also can be a period of stress, sadness, and loneliness for others—and sometimes can be particularly difficult for people living with mental health and substance use conditions.”
- Always, always reach out to FEAP (Faculty Employee Assistance Program) with any questions or concerns this season and anytime—for FREE!

OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH AND SAFETY

Tools for Your Toolbox: Grief During the Holidays

The holiday season can be especially challenging if you're dealing with the death of someone close to you. Whether it was a recent loss or one that occurred some time ago, feelings of grief can be heightened and may seem overwhelming during the holiday season.

Some strategies to help with the challenges that arise with grief during the holidays:

- Set boundaries with holiday events.
- Honor old traditions and honor memories.
- Identify grief coping skills — Check out these balanced affirmations!
- Ask for help! Grief counseling and support groups are excellent ways to find support.

FEAP has resources available as well, check out their tip of the month on grief!

Remember, you are your own unique person. Honor your process and go at your own pace.

Did You Know? Job Hazard Analysis

A critical element of any effective safety and health program is a proactive, ongoing process to identify and assess hazards and hazardous situations in both commonly performed jobs and non-routine jobs. A job hazard analysis (JHA), sometimes referred to as a job safety analysis, helps you identify and control unrecognized hazards, as well as hazards that might emerge when a new process or piece of equipment is introduced.

Create a plan before conducting a JHA:

- ★ Gather your team.
- ★ Identify jobs that are candidates for JHAs.
- ★ Decide how you will record the results of the JHA.
- ★ Establish the process to follow up and address the hazards identified in the JHA.

See the great OSHA guide on creating a JHA: <https://at.virginia.edu/v6RSJH>

Be sure to check out the JHA example and blank JHA form provided on the OHS website!

OCCUPATIONAL TRAINING

Holiday Reflections:

The Joy of Sharing Your Skills

The holiday season is more than just a time for festive decorations and family gatherings—it's an opportunity to pass down valuable skills & knowledge through multi-generational learning, especially in the realm of skilled trades. For many of us, whether you're a seasoned professional or apprentice just starting your journey, the holidays offer a unique setting to bridge the gap and foster a sense of community.

For many of us here in FM, the exchange of hands-on expertise is a time-honored tradition. During the holidays, experienced craftspeople often take the initiative to share their wealth of knowledge with family members. This passing of the torch goes beyond the confines of a workshop or jobsite, creating a sense of camaraderie that strengthens the bonds between generations.

In many families, holiday gatherings become impromptu workshops, with seasoned workers demonstrating their techniques and tricks of the trade to eager learners. Whether it's carpentry, welding, plumbing, or electrical work, these sessions serve as informal classrooms where the principles of craftsmanship are taught through storytelling and hands-on experience.

This is not only about the transfer of technical skills but also about instilling the values of hard work, dedication, and craftsmanship. More experienced workers can share their stories of triumphs and challenges, providing insights into the evolution of their trade over the years. This tradition helps the younger generation appreciate the legacy they are inheriting and understand the importance of preserving and advancing these skills.

The holidays can serve as a time to introduce the joy of their craft to family members who may be considering a career in the skilled trades. Hands-on activities and small projects around the house become the perfect opportunity to ignite the spark of interest in potential apprentices, turning holiday gatherings into recruitment grounds for the next generation of skilled professionals.
